

Artist statement

Shakespeare wrote in “Hamlet”, “to thine own self be true”.

My truth is my passion, my commitment and my compulsion to paint. I paint because I must. I paint what I feel and where my imagination takes me.

I don't paint to garner applause, but I'm thankful for it. My truth is also that criticism hurts me, particularly when it comes from fiercest critics: my friend Hameed Haroon and Rehana, my wife and Muse.

During the period that I was painting these works my fascination with the flamingo and the crane grew ever deeper. The splendor of their plumage and the explosion of colour in the natural world beckons me increasingly. And so too, the marvel of human ingenuity of the weavers who meld their inspiration with intricacies of skill to create the magic that is a mere six meters of fabric.
